TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP

January 27, 2011

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP, INC. PROMOTES GLOBAL OPERATIONS MANAGER

Louisville, KY –TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP, INC. has promoted the Operations Manager in their Louisville, Kentucky facility, Kristopher Smith, to Global Operations Manager. His new responsibilities encompass the operational management of all 9 facilities throughout the United States, Mexico, Israel and United Kingdom.

Kristopher Smith originally joined Technology Conservation Group in July 2007, working in the Warehouse to learn the business from the ground up. He quickly proved himself and was tapped in early 2008 to manage the newly-opened Kentucky facility. For the last 2 ½ yrs he has effectively led his facility through process efficiencies, volume increases and departmental expansions. His in-depth knowledge of the processes involved in handling material in a safe and environmentally-conscious way, in addition to his strong leadership skills, has added greatly to the success of the company as a whole.

About TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP

Founded in 1996 TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP specializes in asset disposition and recycling of waste stream commodities generated through the manufacturing of electronics and electronic components. TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP recycles, reuses and/or remarkets virtually 100% of its intake. TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP holds a multi-site certification to ISO 14001:2004 standards, adheres to all levels of environmental regulations, and respects design security without sacrificing returns. TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP serves an international customer base through its strategically located facilities throughout North America, Mexico, United Kingdom, Israel and India.
