TECHNOLOGY CONSERVATION GROUP

January 17, 2011

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Technology Conservation Group opens new facility in Kentucky

Dec 26, 2007 – Technology Conservation Group, an electronic recycler centered in Lecanto, Florida, is proud to announce expansion of their worldwide operations to include an 25,920 square foot facility in Louisville, Kentucky.

The Technology Conservation Group (TCG) headquarters in the US is certified to ISO 14001:2004 standards, adheres to all levels of environmental regulations, and respects design security without sacrificing returns. TCG facilities in Guadalajara, Mexico, Monterrey, Mexico, and Hungary are also ISO 14001 certified. All Technology Conservation Group (TCG) facilities worldwide adhere to the same ISO standards so no matter which facility handles material, it will be processed using the same high standards.

This recent expansion will improve on TCG's current and future business partners' (contract manufacturers, original equipment manufacturers, government municipalities, medical facilities, or any other type of business with electronic waste) ease of doing business worldwide.
